During the past year, organizations' internal digitalization has taken a huge leap forward. In practice, there is pressure for greater support for employees working digitally outside the office. Based on recent studies, even when offices re-open, an ever greater number of employees are reluctant to go back to the old commute – which means the future of work is hybrid.

Beyond intranet and digital collaboration, Valo digital workplace tools provide effective organization development no matter where staff work from. Valo modules are designed for easy deployment and governance throughout the roll out process and lifecycle as the organization adopts the new digital model of work. The global network of Valo implementation partners ensure that customers always get local support for their specific needs.
